PATRICIA CLASON, RCC, has been a trainer, professional speaker, consultant and writer for over twenty-five years. She is now the Director of the Center for Creative Learning, LLC, which offers programs for personal and professional development at offices in Milwaukee, Madison, and Detroit. She has traveled across the continent doing over 3,000 presentations for corporations, associations, government agencies and non-profit organizations since 1973. Patricia has written many articles, training programs and personal growth seminars and has been a sought-after guest for radio and television.

The focus of her work is on alternative methods of teaching and learning that produce high quality results. Her search for the best in the technology of human resource development has taken her as a student on many adventures through traditional and some not-so-traditional training programs.

As a consultant and coach to other businesses, large and small, in the areas of start-up, marketing, and management skills, she guides people to manifesting their dreams. Her articles often appear in business and trade publications and her column Ask the Coach appears in the Employment Times.
